

Trevor Elmendorf
Director of Communications

Trevor Elmendorf joined the New York State Broadcasters Association in August 2023 and serves as a central point of connection between the association and its members across the state. He leads NYSBA's digital communications, assembling the weekly New York NewStream newsletter that reaches broadcasters in every market from Buffalo to Long Island. Trevor also develops the social media strategy and original graphics that keep members informed about association programs, advocacy efforts, and industry news.

Trevor also manages the NYSBA websites, oversees the membership dues process, and administers the association's job board, which promotes stations' opportunities to emerging talent across New York. His work supports every corner of the organization, from the Excellence in Broadcasting Awards and Hall of Fame to the Rising Leaders program and member outreach. He serves as the lead point of contact for media relations and sends out occasional press releases.

A native of Latham, NY, Trevor graduated from Siena College in 2022 and brings a background in education to his role, having previously worked as a middle school substitute teacher in the North Colonie Central School District. In his spare time, he enjoys playing Tennis, going to the movies, and attending concerts.
